TO ALL THE BROTHERS
OF THE SOCIETY OF SAINT PAUL

Dearest Brothers,

I am happy to present to you the fruit of our International Seminar on the Pauline Pastoral Work for Vocations, which took place from October 21 to 25, 2024. This experience placed the theme of vocation at the center of our reflection. The days of sharing were marked by an awareness that it is precisely within a “vocational culture” that those vocational “generative seeds” must grow in our communities and within each of us so they can be shared with love and care with today’s young people.

A path filled with many ideas, certainly not a simple document to implement. This is precisely why I invite you to read it, study it both personally and collaboratively, and use it as an opportunity to come together and reflect on how to make this vital aspect of our lives more concrete for the future of the Pauline mission.

At the same time, the invitation is to enhance these reflections during the Eucharistic Visit, especially in June, which is dedicated to Saint Paul. He experienced how the encounter with the Risen One brings about “new things” (Isaiah 43:19a) and, like a seed, possesses the strength to generate new life—a new mission for the Church throughout all times.

Let us not grow weary in being joyful witnesses to our vocation. With courage and unwavering hope, let us share the Pauline life with young people, even within the existential context of the digital network.

We entrust everything to the Divine Master, and through the intercession of Blessed James Alberione, may our commitment to pray and work for the Pauline vocation grow.

Fraternally,

Domenico Soliman
